

Who are we?

Utah Clean Cities Coalition (UCCC) is a nationally recognized, locally-based partnership of individuals; small businesses; large corporations; and local, state and federal governments working together to promote cleaner air and energy security by encouraging the use of alternative fuels.

What do we stand for?

Our mission is simple: Reduce dependence on foreign oil and improve air quality by promoting the increased use of alternative fuels for transportation.

Where are we going?

- We assist fleets and individuals throughout Utah who are interested in using cleaner fuels and technologies that are more efficient and cost effective.
- We have helped stakeholders reduce petroleum consumption by over 4,400,000 gallons.
- We provide strategies for anyone interested in achieving energy independence.
- We educate both young and old about the benefits of alternative fuels and transportation options for the future.

What do we provide?

We offer a clear and achievable choice between continued dependence on polluting foreign oil or greener, cleaner, better — and often cheaper — alternative fuels that are now available throughout Utah. We provide assistance for anyone looking to utilize biodiesel, compressed natural gas, electricity, ethanol, hybrid fuels, hydrogen, and propane as a viable alternative transportation fuel that improves air quality and reduces costs.

What can we do for you?

- We can educate you, your family, your business and fleet operators about ways to reduce the use of petroleum products and save money.
- We can assist you in obtaining grants and/or loans for the use of alternative-fuel vehicles.
- We can assist you in improving the air we and our children breathe by reducing harmful vehicle emissions.
- We can provide you with practical solutions for personally reducing your foreign-oil consumption.
